Congressman John Larson Visits Murtha's Hartford Office

First District Congressman John B. Larson, the fourth-ranking member in the U.S. House of Representatives, paid a visit to Murtha Cullina's Hartford office on March 13. Larson, who is Chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, used the opportunity to speak to the assembled attorneys and staff about his role in working with the House leadership and President Obama to develop a stimulus package for the nation's struggling economy. Larson, who recently returned from Afghanistan, also discussed the role of the U.S. in working with NATO allies to establish peace in an area of the world troubled by insurgents and unrest in the neighboring states of Pakistan and India. He indicated health care and energy self-sufficiency would be on this Congress' agenda this session in addition to the restructuring of the economy.
