Description:

Jonathan Horne, a partner, is a member of the firm's Litigation Department and Bankruptcy and Creditors' Rights Group.

In his bankruptcy practice, Jonathan represents businesses and individuals in all aspects of the bankruptcy process. He represents committees, trustees and debtors in connection with commercial bankruptcy and insolvency matters, including initiating and defending bankruptcy litigation, involuntary bankruptcy proceedings, state court receiverships and advising and negotiating in connection with out-of-court workouts and forbearance agreements.

In his litigation practice, Jonathan represents clients' interests in a wide range of commercial and business disputes, including D&O fiduciary litigation, complex contract and construction disputes in both state and federal court. Jonathan also represents clients in ERISA benefit claims with a focus on representing insurance companies in medical benefit claim cases.

Jonathan received his B.A. from Wabash College and his J.D. from St. John's University School of Law. He has been recognized as a Rising Star by Massachusetts Super Lawyers since 2016. He is a member of the American Bankruptcy Institute and is admitted to practice in Massachusetts and New York.
